LISBON HISTORICAL SOCIETY

CONNECTICUT

Lisbon Historical Society Quarterly Notes

By Kim Sperry

Burnham Tavern Update: Building and Grounds chairman Ken Mahler reports that construction of the sashes and window frames are in process. An existing original window and an historic photograph from the late 1800s will serve as a pattern to custom build each new window, one at a time. We had difficulty in sourcing materials due to either a lack of availability or price out of reach. Ultimately, we were required to purchase a minimum of 1,000 board feet of milled antique cedar telephone poles, which is more than the job requires, the excess will be sold or held for future restoration work. The window sills were just refinished after being scraped, filled and painted with two finish coats. All sills are original to the house, except one and are in remarkable condition considering they date back to about 1770. The next major project are clapboards for which we will be writing grants to cover the expense.

John Bishop House Update: A brief summary of the chimney inspection is based on the formal report submitted from De Sciscio Construction. The kitchen fireplace appears to be in good condition, however minor mortar joint repointing is needed within the firebox, and the fireplace, smoke shelf and flue chamber should receive a basic cleaning. It is recommended that the bake oven dome and its floor area receive a basic cleaning repointing as necessary. The front parlor fireplace, smoke shelf and flue chamber are recommended to receive a basic cleaning, and the firebox and floor repointed and fractured brick replaced as necessary; parging is recommended to be applied to areas of the smoke shelf. Work will commence as soon as the cost estimate and contractor are available.

The south face of the Bishop House received a new coat of paint after scraping and priming, also several clapboards were replaced. Due to cost constraints and order of need we refinish one side at a time.

Paul Adams has fully restored the period herb garden and it is looking great. Broom corn and scarlet runner beans are reaching maturity behind the picket fence.

Anshei Israel Synagogue Update: The synagogue, no longer a house of worship, is a museum opened by appointment. Email Paula Adams at padams60@sbcglobal.net for information. Additionally, A Refuge in the Country, a booklet on the history of the synagogue is available upon request and at the Lisbon Town Hall.

Newent Church Update: The former congregational church, like the synagogue is no longer a house of worship and is now leased to the Lisbon Historical Society. A number of projects are in the works, painting is a priority subject to cost and timing as is new signage and restoration of the memorial garden.

A rental agreement for groups to use the social hall for parties, gatherings, or meetings is nearly finalized. Interested parties should reach out to Vicky Lawhead at 860-376-9153 who keeps the calendar.

Cans and Bottles Update. We are thankful for your donation of these redeemable glass, plastic, and aluminum bottles and cans that are marked CT or CTRV. Your donations support the John Bishop House, Anshei Israel Synagogue, Burnham Tavern and Newent Church. Although the State legislature added new products to the redemption stream like Gatorade, and tea beverages there are still a few exceptions. Wine bottles, plastic milk jugs, plastic food packing, High Noon and Fishers Island are not redeemable and should be recycled in blue bins on recycle day. Additionally, it is impossible for the bar code readers at the redemption centers to process crushed aluminum cans and plastic bottles. In addition to can and bottle donations, we are now an Amazon Smile Charity. Amazon donates 0.5% of the price of your eligible AmazonSmile purchases, and there is no cost to the Amazon customer, go to Smile.Amazon.Com

From The History Books

DIGGING FOR TREASURE

By Marcia Shafer, Lisbon Town Historian

Treasures that have been found on our property are shoe parts, toys, buttons, many shards of china or ceramics, salt glazed parts of jugs, many glass bottles of various sizes and colors, pig scraper candle holders, half a frame to make the buckshot for making the ammunition for colonial guns, small pieces of old glass bottles that would have contained drinking fluids, keys, marbles, candle snuffers, salt glazed pottery, and various sizes of door straps.

My favorite item is the first object we found after we moved into our home back in 2001. It is a metal spoon with the initials HMF in script and has a solder area joining the handle to the bowl of the tablespoon size eating utensil. There is a small area missing at the tip of the spoon and a split in the spoon towards the center of the bowl of the spoon. There are symbols for the maker on the back of the handle.

Spoon found on our historic property in Lisbon. It is believed this spoon belonged to Hannah or Susannah Fitch, wife of Asa Fitch.

If you are going to do any digging along a rock wall, move piles of dirt, or any area that is going to become a new building, you will want to have your tools ready to work for you. If an old building is being taken down, you might find a treasure trove of items. First get a pair or two of gloves that will keep your hands clean but be able to feel objects through them in case you don't see them at first. If you need to get permission to dig that is your first task unless you own the land or site.

You will also need a trowel or small garden shovel, old toothbrush or some soft bristle paint brushes, a tape measure, pen or pencil and notebook to document your finds, a cell phone or camera for pictures. You might want a magnifying glass to see the finer details of the objects.

When you decide that there aren't any more items in that location you can move to an area next to the first 12 inch x 12 inch square. When you have become more skilled at locating and digging objects, they recommend you do a 3 foot x 3 foot area but you start small until you have refined your skills. You should put each item in a zip lock bag and label it: where you found it, its size, and what you think it might be. Take the paint brush and gently brush around the object until you can clean a small area and determine what you might be seeing. Then gently take a spade or a garden shovel and make a big circle around it and clear the soil off. Do it slowly and gently so that you don't break any part of the object that is underground. Keep doing this until you have freed the object from the dirt. Set the object off to the side, continue to brush the dirt away from the site and see if there are any more objects in the same location.

As an amateur just starting to dig for items, you should start with a small area 12 x12 inch square until you become skilled at seeing an object, cleaning the area with a brush, and note any changes in the type of soil it is sticking out of (if you can see changes in color or different layers of dirt). A professional archaeologist is needed to come in for further studies on the objects or the location where found. Find a landmark and measure the distance between the two spaces.

The most important item is to have something to sift the dirt and remove small pebbles or items from the dirt. For a beginner a small colander or sieve would work until you can get or build a sifter with a wooden frame and the smallest wire fencing to fit over the frame. You might want a bucket or tarp to put the dirt on while you search and sift so you can replace what you have dug up. Save the top layer of the grass and dirt plug you dug up so to put it back where you found it.

You are an amateur archaeologist when you happen to be moving rocks, digging a hole, playing in the dirt, or just happen to notice an object laying on the ground or sticking partially out of the ground. Once you find one piece of treasure you get the urge to keep looking for more pieces to see if you can make a complete or near complete item/treasure.

If it is just lying on the ground, you can pick it up and look at it to determine what it might be. For an object that is sticking out of the ground and seems to be partially buried, you would want to dig it up very carefully and see what the object is or was. Your best action is to brush it with a paint brush first to see how big it is or how far it is sticking out of the ground and what might still be in the ground.

It is possible to find shards or chips of dishes that people threw out, or dropped. There are many nails that can be found and various other items. Don't be surprised if you find bones. These may have been food for the people who lived there before you, an animal bone, or if you find many bones or a shape of a creature or small animal don't be surprised. If you find the body of a person call the police.

In colonial days they just threw items over the rock walls or down an outhouse seat, or in an area that didn't have foot traffic. Another recommended area is around a flower bed or while you are starting a new flower bed. Also, an old tree to sit under for shade, farm land or around foundations of buildings but ask permission first to do that area.

Keep your gloves on while you are digging, sifting materials, or looking for items in the soil. There may be sharp objects or items in the soil that could injure your hands. Pieces of glass that might have been from window frames, rusty nails, pieces or shards of china or ceramics, broken pieces of salt glazed pottery, buttons, or marbles, possibly wires or rusted out pieces of farm equipment. Added to this list of treasures are parts of bottles-especially the very thick bottom of the bottle. These could cause injury to your fingers or hands and cause nasty infections. Pay close attention while you are digging, as you need to dig in small layers so that you don't miss any objects or damage an unseen item.

When you are finished with your dig site you need to return the sifted soil back into your dig pit and if possible, put the grass plug back and pack it down so the grass roots can take hold again and soon no one will know you dug there. Plus, the yard will look nice and even. Now you need to document where you dug, how far down you dug when you found an object or item, describe it by size, color, and any unique features or colors. Depending on what you find, you might be able to draw a picture of the item or a written description taking measurements of the object as well.

Save all the objects you find because you never know when you might find more of the same and be able to make an object whole again. Ask other people what they think it might be, or if it is an item that requires skilled archeologists to determine what it might be or how old it might be, what country it may have come from, what it was used for, and whether it may have any significant monetary value.

The current State Archaeologist is Dr. Sarah P. Sportman and her email address is sarah.sportman@UConn.edu. If you want some expert advice about what you might have found, you can write to her and send pictures of what you have that she needs to be aware of with a description and she can determine if it is a minor object or of major importance.
